Wallaroo Switching Station & Transmission Line Project

TransGrid is proposing to construct a new switching station at Wallaroo and approximately 1km of transmission line within NSW.

The project will assist in providing the ACT with a second independent bulk electricity supply point, increasing the security of power supply in the region.

TransGrid is seeking expressions of interest from Aboriginal stakeholder groups or individuals who have cultural associations with the area and wish to be consulted throughout the project.

Submissions should demonstrate cultural interest in the subject area, experience and capability in the assessment of cultural heritage, and specific knowledge of local Aboriginal culture.

Written expressions of interest should be sent by C.O.B 19 March 2010 to:
